Start of training at MAPAL in Aalen

35 trainees started their working life at MAPAL on 2nd September. In the next two and a half to three and a half years, these trainees will be professionally trained in various professions at the Aalen-based precision tool manufacturer

35 new trainees and students start their working lives

24 prospective cutting machine operators as well as two industrial mechanics and two mechatronics technicians at MAPAL are getting the tools they need to start their professional careers. There are also five industrial clerks, an IT specialist and a specialist for warehouse logistics. Three students in the fields of machine engineering and industrial engineering and management will begin their dual study programme at the company in October.

A total of 135 young people are currently being prepared for their careers at MAPAL in Aalen, compared with around 300 at all locations in Germany. Young talent is important to the company: "Changes in industry and demographic trends are changing the world of work. That's why we need young, qualified specialists who will tackle tomorrow's challenges with us," says HR Manager Hans Krauss, explaining the company's consistently high training quota. When the trainees have successfully completed their training, MAPAL offers graduates the prospect of a job as well as diverse further training and development opportunities.
